RECOVERY WEEKEND

FACES ADDICTION HEAD ON

In a precedent-setting event held Oct. 3–5 at the Adventist Medical Center in Portland, Ore., nearly 100 individuals gathered for the first Adventist Recovery Ministries training event to be jointly sponsored by North American Division (NAD), North Pacific Union Conference (NPUC) and Adventist Health.

Katie Reinert, North American Division health ministries director, led out in the jointly sponsored meeting.

Katie Reinert, NAD health ministries director, says the NPUC is the second union in North America to hold such an event. Her emphasis is on equipping local churches to be welcoming but safe environments for hosting local addiction-recovery programs. "We love everyone," she says, "but there has to be accountability regarding safety for all."

Reinert hopes to organize additional events in the remaining union conferences around the NAD during the next couple of years. These programs are meant to sensitize members and churches to the need and to help them partner with confidential professional resources in helping individuals find an accepting spiritual foundation and church home.

John Loor Jr., NPUC executive secretary, who worked closely with Reinert to organize the Portland event, says Adventist members need to seriously consider what more they can do to provide a redemptive environment. "Our churches need to be safe churches to which people can come," he says. "Adventist Recovery Ministries helps churches to become those kinds of safe places."

Local conferences within the NPUC will continue to follow up with additional resources and events to apply this emphasis to individual congregations who are willing. For more information, contact your local conference.

THE ENVELOPE PLEASE!

At the Society of Adventist Communicators convention held Oct. 16–18 in Jacksonville, Fla., the Gleaner, designed by Matthew McVane of Guildhouse Group in Walla Walla, Wash., received the top award voted by other North American communicators in seven categories: best print magazine, best feature (September 2013, "The Record Keeper"), best cover design (June 2014, "Persecuted"), best column (June 2014, "Dude, Where's My Ark?" by Seth Pierce), best photograph (April 2014, nature photo by Lynne McClure), best website (GleanerNow.com), and best email newsletter (GleanerWeekly). In addition, Washington Conference received an award for the Living God's Mission social media campaign on behalf of this year's camp meeting, with efforts directed by Heidi Baumgartner.

YOUTH SET SAILS FOR THE Kingdom

MIX 180 YOUNG PEOPLE AND THEIR LEADERS TOGETHER ON A SAILING SHIP IN THE MIDDLE OF A RAINY OCTOBER WEEKEND, AND YOU'LL GET AN ADVENTURE.

Bob Gaede, a lay member from Rockaway Beach, Oregon, has planned a number of active weekend activities for Oregon Conference Pathfinders. But this was the first one he has organized on behalf of three Northwest conferences — Oregon, Washington and Upper Columbia.

Gaede is passionate about providing spiritual, hands-on experiences to Adventist youth, and this weekend event, centered in Olympia, Washington, and held October 10–12, was no different. Activities were organized around three stations: an adventure on the historic Adventuress sailing vessel, a trip on an open whaling boat and a learning activity on small sailing dinghys.

The Adventuress is a 130-foot vessel listed as a National Historic Landmark and operated by Sound Experience, a nonprofit entity. Gaede and his team designed an onboard program for the Pathfinders that helped them experience the spiritual lessons in the stories of Jesus asleep in the disciples' boat and of Peter attempting to walk on the water, as well as learn the basics of navigation and tall-ship sailing.

Pathfinders and leaders ride the bowsprit net at the front of the ship.

The weekend was forecast to be inclement, with rain and wind. When the first group went out on the large sailing vessel, clouds were dark and rain was falling out on the Sound. But the ship sailed for four straight hours with rain on each side and bright skies overhead. Only when it returned to the dock did the heavens open. Likewise, rain held off for the afternoon sailing and again on Sunday morning.

Crew members and Pathfinders help roll the sails as the boat prepares to return to the harbor.

Another activity, originating from the Tacoma, Washington, Sea Scouts base, took Pathfinders out on a whaling boat, originally from the USS Nimitz. On the water, leaders recounted the example of Jonah, drawing "lots" to see who would be thrown overboard to illustrate the story.

While this event may have helped each Pathfinder who went achieve a better understanding of sailing, the main purpose, says Gaede, was something far more important. "With each of these weekend events, we hope to create a spiritual experience surrounding a Pathfinder honor by using some activity other than a sermon," he says. "Hands-on lessons make a lasting impression for the kingdom and build lifelong friendships."

Gaede began organizing local Pathfinder events with Anne and Glenn Campbell 18 years ago. Even with the hard work of the leadership team, including, among others, Rick Pummel, Ed and Erin Betz, and Michael and Lauren Gregory, this weekend wouldn't have happened without a few miracles along the way. Miracle after miracle, says Gaede, keeps these events going strong. "It's such an incredible way," he says, "to work with the Lord."

CUMBRE DE LÍDERES 2014-2015

“Sin embargo, algunos fueron tercios y no quisieron creer, y le hablaron mal del Camino a toda la gente. Entonces Pablo los dejó y se fue con los seguidores de Jesús a una escuela de un hombre llamado Tirano. Allí Pablo todos los días mantenía un diálogo con la gente. Así continuó durante dos años, de manera que todos los de la región de Asia, judíos o griegos, escucharon el mensaje del Señor” (Hechos 19:9, 10; Palabra de Dios para todos).

La evangelización no avanza sin retos. Sus desafíos dan oportunidades para formar líderes. En las palabras del doctor Lucas, el autor del libro Hechos de los Apóstoles, encontramos indicios de que el apóstol Pablo era un capacitador de líderes. Pablo, usando el diálogo como método de instrucción, enseñó de modo sistemático por espacio de dos años.

El trabajo de Pablo en Éfeso, proporciona un modelo para nuestras iglesias en la Conferencia de Idaho. Con el fin de equipar a los creyentes para el ministerio, se llevó a cabo la primera cumbre de líderes el pasado sábado 25 de octubre en el sureste del estado. La sede de este evento fue el salón de usos múltiples del templo donde se reúne el grupo hispano de Heyburn.

El pastor Gerald Margil convocó a los líderes de su distrito para tres fines: Primero INFORMAR sobre la visión y estrategias misioneras del Ministerio Hispano para el 2015. Segundo, ANIMAR la vena misionera entre los catorce asistentes, representantes de Idaho Falls, Jerome, Twin Falls, y Heyburn. Y en tercer lugar, FACILITAR primicias de materiales útiles que ayuden a llevar acabo la tarea, para el nuevo período eclesiástico.

Los recuerdos quedaron congelados en fotografías. Por primera vez se reunían los líderes del nuevo “Distrito del Sureste de Idaho”. Hacían historia. Sus sonrisas fraternas no fueron para derretir ningún hielo. Ellos se conocían, faltaba juntarlos, organizarlos, y crear una visión en concierto. El pastor Margil junto a su esposa, gracias a Dios, facilitan esa armonía. Se dedican a darle el mejor perfil al recién formado distrito. Apenas llevan cuatro meses de haber llegado al valle, y ya comparten con su rebaño la satisfacción de recibir a nuevos miembros en sus congregaciones. La nueva pareja pastoral también disfruta del Señor bajo su nuevo techo, porque una vez más, fue Él quien “extendió su brazo poderoso y su mano fuerte, porque su fiel amor es para siempre” (Salmos 136:12; PDT). ¡Gloria sea a nuestro Dios!

ANCHORAGE SPANISH CHURCH RIDES OUTREACH WAVE

Summer was busy for the Anchorage Spanish congregation.

Andres Portés, evangelist for the Southwest Region Conference and speaker for the La Voz del Consolador (The Voice of the Comforter) Ministry, visited the church in June. Portés was accompanied by clinical psychologists Miguel and María Di Francisco, who met and counseled families during their visit.

Riding the wave of spiritual fervor generated by these meetings, the congregation has embarked upon an intense program to reach Hispanic families across Anchorage. Each church family is being encouraged to adopt a minimum of two non-Adventist families in their neighborhood with whom they may share a short visit, prayer and uplifting religious material once per week. A monthly series of specially tailored seminars was held through October to bring together those in the community interested in the outreach efforts.

A seminar in August by Israel Rivera, a pastor from Montemorelos, Mexico, captivated community interest with lectures on health and family. “The Hispanic community in Anchorage demonstrated a very positive attitude toward the information we shared with them regarding health and spirituality, understanding that the spiritual life is as important as physical health,” says Rivera.

Anchorage Spanish Church leaders and members generally feel the time has arrived for God to do something special within Anchorage’s Spanish-speaking community. The wave seems to be gathering momentum, and the Holy Spirit is convicting His people to reach Hispanic Anchorage for Jesus.

Despite the rain, Juneau Adventist Christian School students are enjoying their new playground.

JUNEAU SEES ANOTHER OF GOD’S MIRACLES

The Juneau Adventist Christian School had needed a new playground for many years. The school board and Juneau Church members have been praying for and wishing this playground would become a reality, but finances, inclement weather and not having enough workers were holding back the process.

Once again God came through, and on Sunday, Aug. 31, this hope and dream became a reality. With the help of many workers and a financial contribution from church member Fortuna Odell, who passed away last August, the installation of new playground equipment and rubber mulch at the school was complete. The weather even cooperated to allow the installation to be finished and the rain held off until about 15 minutes after the last of the rubber mulch was laid.

Despite a lot of rain since the installation, the students are now able to enjoy “dry time” time on the playground during recess on school days and after school.

God has once more allowed a dream to become a reality. The school is also going to install fencing around the grounds to protect the children and the new equipment. God is so good — all the time.

MERIDIAN MEMBERS HELP PERUVIAN KIDS

When 12 students from the Adventist-run Jerusalem Elementary School in Iquitos, Peru, were baptized Aug. 22, retired Pacific Press Publishing Association employee Chuck Bobst felt

About 90 children attend the Jerusalem Elementary School in Iquitos, Peru.

God was affirming the difficult decision he had made seven years before.

After an initial mission trip to Iquitos with the People of Peru Project¹ in 2006 to establish a crisis center there, Bobst had chosen to shift his focus to helping children and their families in less-affluent areas of the jungle-surrounded community. He subsequently founded Bridge the Gap Inc., a nonprofit mission organization.

Meridian Church members and others have since supported his endeavors. This year, Aug. 18–Sept. 1, Bobst and six Meridian Church members made the annual trek to Iquitos — the largest city in the world that can't be reached by road — to support to struggling families.

“I wanted to work on the grassroots level and help kids and families in real need, so we partnered with the Jerusalem school, established for children living in high-poverty areas,” Bobst says.

The school has a principal, six full-time and two part-time teachers, all Adventists. About half the student body is Adventist.

Unfortunately, the school’s future is precarious because the church in which it’s housed is available only short-term. “We’re not sure where the money to build or purchase a new school will come from,” Bobst notes, “but we’re trusting the Lord will provide.”

BUTTE HOLDS 'REVOLUTION' SEMINAR

Hurry, we need more chairs!" exclaimed Tom Russell, Butte Church member, as he recruited members to help with the overflow of visitors lined up to register for the church's Revolution seminar. The joy and energy of these eager members to accommodate the interest of the local community suggested what the early apostolic church must have experienced when God blessed their faith by following up the work of sowing with a public crusade on the day of Pentecost.

Nearly 70 visitors coming on opening night to a church of 15 active members was enough to set the church on fire. After the first week in the local fire hall, the event transferred to the church, with 51 visitors continuing to attend along with excited members.

Lance Elias, Butte Church head elder, says, "We've never seen this kind of turnout and interest in this community before ... It's inspiring."

Linda Barney attended every night after she received the flyer in the mail. She was scheduled to be on vacation but experienced an overwhelming conviction to put her plans on hold so she could attend the seminar. She learned her friend Angela had received the same flyer and wanted to invite Barney. They both decided to commit together from start to finish. "The truth was so clear and powerful, it has changed my life," says Barney. Both she and Angela were excited to be baptized together and find a new church family with which to enjoy their renewed faith.

Prior to the series, Donna Bacon, Butte Church evangelism coordinator, advertised at the local university for a panel of young people to attend 10 nights of the series for $150. The students were required to fill out nightly evaluation forms of their personal thoughts on the messages and overall opinions of the series. As the series progressed, so did its impact on these young evaluators. All six remained with the meetings until the end, and all were baptized and joyfully joined the Adventist church family.

Due to several abusive relationships, Patti Ward had become an alcoholic and tried several programs to overcome her struggle. When she finally experienced the power of the gospel, Ward was freed from her addiction.

At the seminar's conclusion, the Lord blessed the Butte Church with 16 baptisms and eight more people attending a new believers class led by Elias.

Visitors greatly outnumber members during the Butte Church evangelistic series.

The Butte evangelistic series concludes with 15 baptisms plus eight people attending a new believers class.

If there is any doubt about the effectiveness of public evangelism, Pentecost should be a reminder of God's willingness to bring the harvest if the church is willing to be a channel by doing its part in proclaiming the good news of His soon return. Just ask Butte.

MEMBER MINISTERS, HELPS PEOPLE

Have you heard the slogan from the Oregon Conference, “Members in Ministry”? For more than 30 years, Carl Parker has been a member in ministry through People to People Ministries (PPM), which started in the late 1970s.

Parker, one of the founders of the ministry, had just completed his studies at Oregon State University in Corvallis and wanted to make a difference in the urban Portland community. People to People Ministries began hiring college students to tutor children who needed a little extra help after school. Six-week summer programs were well-attended by inner-city children, and parents encouraged the ministry to start a school. Through a series of providences, the Community Learning Center was built and served elementary students for 15 years.

PPM has since transitioned into a different phase of ministry that encompasses three areas: humanitarian, health and gospel outreach.

The humanitarian segment sponsors the Weekend Backpack Lunch Program, which provides food for disadvantaged students on weekends, food boxes for needy families and supplemental supplies for the Community Transitional School, a nonprofit school that serves homeless children. (Read more on this school in the November issue of the Oregon Conference eCommuniq   at OregonConference.org). Jesus said, “For I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink . . .” (Matt. 25:35–40).

involved in promoting subscriptions to Vibrant Life magazine and helps host a monthly Healthy Supper Club at Stone Tower Church in Portland.

The gospel outreach segment of PPM mails Bible study request cards and literature and offers online Bible studies. The organization has also partnered with Portland-area churches, including Lents, Mount Tabor, Stone Tower and University Park, to reach people in their respective communities.

People to People Ministries works through a wide range of projects to educate people about living healthier lives and to help those in need — using the opportunity, in whatever form it presents itself, to share Jesus.

GARY MCLAIN

Donald Sargeant was recognized by David Ballard, Hopewell Church pastor, and the rest of the church family during a special service on Oct. 4.

MEMBER SERVES SAME CHURCH FOR 87 YEARS

Donald Sargeant was born April 11, 1927, in a cute little house in Hopewell, Ore., only about a half mile from the now-111-year-old Hopewell Church, which still sits on the edge of a large corn field. He has been a member of the Hopewell Church since he was born 87 years ago.

Sargeant was an only child raised by his grandmother, who would walk him to church during his childhood. Sargeant says, “My grandmother did a good job raising me and instilled a faith and love for God in me.”

He was baptized in the Chautauqua building at Gladstone Camp Meeting in the early 1940s. He worked on a farm and served in the Navy during World War II, and he cared for patients at the state psychiatric hospital in Salem for 34 years.

To this day Sargeant is still actively involved with serving his God and his church. Sargeant has been a deacon, elder, Sabbath School leader and teacher. He mows the lawn, cleans, and even paints the church when it is needed, just to mention a few things. Sargeant never felt he was keeping the church going when maybe the attendance was slim. When something needed to be done, he would just do it. Because of his consistent faithfulness, the Hopewell Church is still a beacon of light to its community.

The planning for this September effort took place in January when Ron Clouzet, Moreno’s and Nixon’s professor, shared that he would be offering an evangelistic series in Vancouver, Wash., and indicated Lents Church could request a couple of his students present an evangelistic series as well.

Moreno’s and Nixon’s messages have been affecting non-Adventist attendees, and the Lents Church family is looking forward to future baptisms.

CAA STAYS KNEE-DEEP IN PRAYERS

This year Columbia Adventist Academy (CAA) is making intentional efforts to remain on guard and knee-deep in prayers while sending warriors into the battlefield on a daily basis.

These Battle Ground, Wash., battle plans began with a school walk sponsored by Clark County Prayer Connect. Jeff Jackson, CAA principal, led out as community members, alumni and staff walked throughout the school and prayed for the students and staff.

During a dedication chapel, the students, staff, community members and pastors from constituent churches prayed that God will be glorified throughout the school year. A new weekly morning prayer meeting called “Tent of Meeting” involves students, staff, parents and community members.

Sharon Crosby, CAA alumna, recently shared that, during her academy reunion, classmates told stories of how the prayers of a praying parent, who has continued to pray for the class to this day, had impacted their lives. “You could feel the answer to those prayers as our class went around the circle and shared how God had blessed them, been near to them in trouble, and was a huge part of the majority of our classmate’s lives,” Crosby shared.

May the legacy of a praying community and being knee-deep in prayers at CAA continue until Jesus comes.

SUNNYSIDE HELPS FAMILY FIND HOME OF THEIR OWN

Rachel and her three sons (Issac, 10; Angelo, 7; and Jesse, 4) had been living in homeless shelters for almost three years — one shelter during the day and another at night. They were never alone. There was occasional verbal abuse and sometimes threats of physical harm. This was no place to raise a family.

Unbeknownst to Rachel, the road home started with the Sunnyside Church in southeast Portland. Sunnyside women’s ministries group was participating in Healthy Sisters, a program to transport homeless women to medical appointments. Through this, the opportunity arose to participate with the Village Support Network of Portland and help a homeless family transition to permanent housing.

Women’s ministries co-chairs Kathy Pruitt and Dianne Glovatsky, encouraged and supported by associate pastor Shirley Allen, received approval from the church board in November 2013 for the expanded project. The SAFE (Sunnyside Adventist Family Enrichment) team was formed and started to work.

The team’s goals were to help with finding appropriate housing, setting up the new household, get the family settled into the community, set family budget and educational goals, and share God’s love in a meaningful way.

A total of 14 congregations in the Portland area, representing a variety of denominations, participated in projects like this in 2014. As of September 2014, the Sunnyside project was a great success. Rachel is enrolled in a local community college making progress toward her career goals, the school-age boys are attending school, and all are happy in their new home.

Rachel recently thanked the Sunnyside congregation during a church service. “I couldn’t have done this without your help,” she said. The SAFE team hopes to help another family next year.

Richard Pearson, who came out of retirement to head up the custodial department, had heart trouble last year and needed to prepare his winter fuel supply. He says the young men who helped him were a "major blessing." He adds, "We split and stacked three cords of Douglas fir, and all I heard were uplifting comments."

Two groups from Milo collaborated with Kay Cooksley and the Canyonville Church to beautify the public elementary school in Canyon-

Bill and Barbara Schlaman got help with an overwhelming pile of wood needing to be stacked. "The boys were just a delight, to listen to them talking and laughing as they worked," the Schlamans say. "They got a large amount done, which gave us a real lift."

Asked what she thought of Neighbor Day, senior Emily Parish responded, "It was awesome."

"It was a very, very fun day to get off campus, enjoy getting to know our neighbors and help them with things that needed to be done," says David Echevarria, Milo junior.

"Jesus speaks of loving our neighbors, and his brother, James, talks about helping those in our community," says Chad Reising, Milo chaplain. "Neighbor Day provides students and staff opportunity to

After the fire, Lola Mae Worth said, “We had our home, but we were in shock. Seeing our neighbors suffer their losses was heartwrenching.”

On cleanup day, teams started arriving. More than 36 people came to clear blackened trees. “The yellow shirts of the Adventist disaster relief workers were soon blackened,” says Worth. “Neighbors began to put on gloves or brought food to help. “The mood changed quickly as each tree fell.”

Among the 36 helpers was Calvin Stevenson, who had trained for forklift and chain saw volunteer work through Adventist Community Services (ACS) at the Upper Columbia Conference office. Hundreds of trees around the golf course needed to be removed, and Stevenson was the only chain saw operator there. He kept the whole team busy cleaning up the 500 trees he felled.

Word got out about the team clearing trees at the golf course, and carloads of people came to see what was happening. “What a difference we can make in two days with a positive attitude,” Worth says. “Are you prepared for a disaster in your area? I hope you are.”

What do volunteers receive for helping out? “It inspired me to want to do a whole lot more for the community,” says Stevenson. “It gives me a real sense of value and worth to be able to help other people in these circumstances.” He encourages everyone to be a part of something like this. “The satisfaction of helping others is marvelous,” he says.

Stevenson spoke to the father of Parker Barth, who owned the community golf course at Alta Lake. “He couldn’t believe we could get this much done. It meant a lot to him,” says Stevenson. “That’s enough reward for me.”

ble will bring students quickly into friendships in their new congregation.

With the city of College Place, Wash., giving approval and assistance, about a quarter mile of Fourth Street was blocked off for the event.

Church members set up about 180 tables end to end. Each table, in white tablecloths, seated eight for Sabbath dinner.

Church members had pre-selected tables — some taking three or four and others taking only one — and had planned complete sit-down Sabbath dinners for their guests. Hosts decorated tables and provided food — some ethnic, some traditional, but all in abundance.

Donny Veverka, University Church worship director, calls this “a phenomenal event of blessing others and being blessed in our community [that] must be experienced to be understood.”

Hosts sent leftovers with students after the meal. Leftover homemade dessert later in the dorm is also part of the Longest Table tradition.

“The Longest Table is a great way for us to get to know the church members,” says Kelia Cook. “It makes us feel very loved and excited to be at Walla Walla University.”

Returning student Rychelle Willis says, “I look forward to the Longest Table every year. It’s such a fun way to fellowship with other students and church members.”

KILGORE PASTORAL MINISTRY AFFIRMED

Surrounded by colleagues, family and mentors, Ryan Kilgore was ordained for ministry in the Seventh-day Adventist Church on Oct. 4 in Brewster, Wash., during a ceremony that highlighted God’s patient calling.

“I am humbled and honored to be here today,” said Kilgore. “In fact, I’m a little bit surprised to be here right now In the last 12 or 13 years God has brought me over and over to places that I did not expect to find myself, and He has revealed to me things that I was not looking for.”

Kilgore grew up in a Christian home on the campus of Auburn Adventist Academy in Washington. After dropping out of college, he began working in the computer industry in Seattle. His life at the time had little room for God. God, however, had plans for Kilgore.

When Kilgore and his girlfriend, Jennifer, were converted in 2003 and married later that year, he began to sense a call not only to serve God but to do so through ministry.

In 2004, the pair quit their jobs in Seattle and moved to College Place, Wash., where Kilgore completed his bachelor’s degree in theology at Walla Walla University. He began serving as an associate pastor

ST. MARIES CHRISTIAN SCHOOL GIVES AND RECEIVES BLESSINGS

One of the biggest challenges for St. Maries Christian School in Idaho has been a necessary move into space at the Shad-owy River Mall. Space for desks and storage is limited, and the parking lot doesn't make the best playground.

However, students have rediscovered their bikes and bike locally for their physical education class. Several biking field trips have taken them to a stretch of the beautiful 72-mile Rails to Trails biking path near Coeur d' Alene.

There is another bright side. "We get plenty of exposure here," says Mark Law, teacher. Shoppers pass the windows throughout the day, occasionally peering in.

One day a man opened the mall door in the middle of class. "Hey, here's something for the hardworking teachers," he said. When the teacher greeted the man, he pushed a bill into the teacher's hand and said, "Go get some ice cream with your students."

Besides receiving such blessings from the generous community, the school plans to be a blessing in its community. Students started by offering to clean the bathrooms in the mall once a week. The manager was delighted.

Another opportunity came when school board member Sue Clark invited the students to pick her garden produce. In just a few minutes, they had harvested 68 pounds of the prolific yellow zucchini and various winter squash. They delivered the vegetables to the Community Action Partnership food bank.

Being a blessing can happen anywhere.

MINISTRY RESTORES LIVES

More than four years ago, Bill Pond would not have considered doing prison ministry. But when he heard of the need for more volunteers, he decided to give it a try at Coyote Ridge Correction Center in Connell, Wash.

Now Pond goes each Sabbath morning and introduces the lesson before a prisoner leads the study of the regular Seventh-day Adventist Sabbath School quarterly. Of the 18 or so men in the group, "none of the guys have ever returned to prison," says Pond.

"We have a lot of respect for the men in prison whose lives have changed through this ministry," says Pond, who is joined by volunteers from Moses Lake and Richland, Wash.

After Sabbath School, Pond goes to Ritzville Church for Sabbath services then returns to Coyote Ridge in the evening with other Ritzville Church volunteers to assist with "Celebrate Recovery." As many as 65 prisoners attend this Christian-oriented 12-step program.

"One of the leaders, in prison 15 years for robbery, said it took him five years before he found Christ," Pond says. "Once he did, he went to work to help many of the guys in prison. He got out a year ago. God has just opened doors for him."

"I know the Holy Spirit is the one doing the work," Pond continues. "We just knock on their hearts' door and give God a chance to come in."

Prison ministry is dear to the heart of Bill Pond. Traveling each Sabbath is not a burden for him. "It's okay," he says. "I don't mind one bit."

HE'S ALIVE TV RECOUNTS INFLUENCE OF CHRISTIAN TV

He's Alive TV (KHBA) in Spokane, Wash., loves learning how God is using television to touch lives.

One Sunday morning, Jay Williams was flipping through channels to watch football. He and his wife noticed a kindly-faced man talking about Jesus. It was George Vandeman. "He was using the Bible as a direct reference for truth," says Williams. "I needed to pause and listen."

From then on, the Williamses had an insatiable desire for truth. They watched It Is Written each Sunday and requested Bible studies. "The Holy Spirit changed my life through TV ministry," Williams says.

Last year, amid hundreds of channels, Sarah Baum and Katherine Richardson separately found He's Alive TV on UHF 39.

Baum watched Dwight Nelson and Doug Batchelor and found answers to her questions about the Sabbath. Richardson was so depressed when she began watching He's Alive TV, she wanted to shoot herself. But when she heard Batchelor speaking, she said, "He made me feel like I could have another chance at life." Both ladies were baptized.

"I knew I was in the right spot where the Lord wanted me to be," says Baum.

Richardson adds, "There are lots of people who just need

He's Alive Television serves the Spokane area through UHF channels 39.1, 39.2, 39.3 and 39.4. It is also broadcast on Roku on Brightstar channel.

ADVENTIST VETS TAKE HONOR FLIGHT

Ken Silver from the Northside Church (Walla Walla, Wash.) and Paul Hellie from the University Church (College Place, Wash.), both Korean War veterans, flew to Washington, D.C., on Oct. 8 for a two-day, all-expense-paid trip arranged by the Honor Flight organization.

This group of 90 World War II and Korean War veterans from the Northwest flew from Spokane, Wash., to Washington, D.C. "We were just like a bunch of brothers from the start," Hellie says.

The group visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Paul Hellie participates in an Honor Flight to Washington, D.C.

World War II Memorial, Korean War Memorial, Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the Navy Memorial.

A young park ranger asked Hellie about the ribbons on his hat. The ranger knew nothing about the Korean War, and Hellie was able to share with him.

The memorial that stands out for Silver is the Korean War Memorial, where fresh flowers are placed every day by the Korean Embassy staff, who know that they would have been like North Korea if not for this "Forgotten War."

The whole experience was touching for the veterans. "I can't express the feeling it gave me to see the people I met on this flight," says Silver.

AMERICAN AND CHINESE EDUCATORS EXCHANGE IDEAS

Earlier this year Chinese educators invited American educators to conduct an in-service training session for teachers in the Yuhang School District in Hangzhou, China.

Lon Gruesbeck, Washington International Student Experience (WISE) director, and David Morgan, Blue Mountain Academy (Hamburg, Pa.) principal, co-presented this teacher in-service Sept. 22–26.

“This was a fantastic opportunity and an honor to be able to share with colleagues in another country,” says Gruesbeck.

Gruesbeck and Morgan presented practical, hands-on training to more than 200 elementary, middle and high school teachers on topics such as “Moving Students Outside the Box” and “The Soul of Education ... Mindset, Attitudes and Methods.” The presentations included short videos and PowerPoint presentations. Eighty-five high school students also joined the training.

“We discovered that students and teachers in China are very much like students and teachers here in America,” says Gruesbeck. “Teachers in China have some of the same desires and passions for their students as American teachers. The challenge for teachers in China is they are not allowed to get out of the proverbial box. One teacher even stated, ‘How can we move our students outside the box when we ourselves are not allowed out of the box?’”

Chinese educators in the Yuhang School District in Hangzhou, China, learn about the “Soul of Education” and how to move students “outside the box.”

Four student ambassadors — Brenden Gay and Ashley Hunte from Blue Mountain Academy and Paris Altman and Connor Hubin from Auburn Adventist Academy — participated in an education exchange.

The students lived in homes with students their own age and attended classes with their host students at Yuhang No. 2 High School.

“Our students had a wonderful learning experience,” says Gruesbeck, “and so many opportunities to share with their fellow students in China.”

COMMUNITY SHOWS SUPPORT FOR NORTHWEST CHRISTIAN'S MUSIC PROGRAM

Students at Northwest Christian School (NCS) heartily belted out the lyrics to “I’m in the Lord’s Army” and “How Great Is Our God” in the midst of their week of prayer on Wednesday, Oct. 29, with good reason.

stole all the working musical instruments, several electronics and a number of power tools from the school campus in Puyallup, Wash.

Radio personalities Kent Phillips and Alan Budwill from KPLZ-FM Star 101.5, along with sister station Talk Radio KVI 570, adopted the school during Wednesday’s morning drive time to raise the $5,000 insurance deductible the school needed. Pledges totaled more than $13,000. Phillips personally delivered the community’s goodwill and met several music students.

Mattson says the school family went from feeling victimized to being overwhelmed by the outpouring of support. “At this point, well over a dozen instruments have been replaced from people in the community,” he says. “One week later, our band performed for the news channels for the first time since the theft.”

As miracle after miracle unfolds at the school, a spirit of awe and thankfulness fills staff and students. When she added her name to student-signed thank-you cards, Clairra Hockenson, music teacher, found a note that said, “Thank you for saving our Christmas program.”

“After the gloomy Monday to start the week of prayer, it was great to stand in front of the school each day and deliver amazing stories of answers to prayer,” says Mattson. “This has truly been an unforgettable week of prayer.”

PRAYER-WALKERS 'BUILD THE WALLS' AT AUBURN ADVENTIST ACADEMY

Dorena Roberts re-members ignoring God's shoving to start prayer-walking because she viewed herself as more of a helper and not a leader.

As a mother, pastor's wife and nurse, Roberts felt impressed at least two times in the last few years to walk seven times around the campus of Auburn Adventist Academy (AAA) to pray for the school. She shared the idea with close

With each lap, prayer-walkers from the Auburn community pray for students and alumni; faculty, staff and families; the spiritual atmosphere of the campus; the school facility structure; international students; school and family finances; and customer service.

Mark Batterson's The Circle Maker. "I felt like God was taking me and shaking me and saying, 'Walk around the campus,'" Roberts says as she reflected on this popular Christian book on prayer. Finally, Roberts agreed to partner with God to lead this prayer activity.

"My mom and I decided to time how long it would take to walk around the campus," Roberts explains. "If you walk the inner campus, it takes seven minutes. If you walk the outer campus, it wasn't a seven number. I felt we should walk inside to build the walls up."

The prayer-walking plan began immersing: pray seven weeks at 7 o'clock for seven things. With each lap, prayer-walkers would pray for seven categories: students and alumni; faculty, staff and families; the spiritual atmosphere of the campus; the school facility structure; international students; school and family finances; and customer service.

Prayer-walk participants ranged from three to 15 people, including faculty, church members, parents and alumni. As the group walked for 49 minutes both morning and evening, they would meet students and faculty along the way. "We couldn't walk past without praying for them," Roberts says. "We stopped to pray with them and let them know why we were there."

While the initial seven weeks of prayer walking have concluded, the idea has not. The Family Weekend program in November invited parents to join in prayer-walking. Church community members are continuing to carve out time to prayer-walk around the campus in small and large groups. "It makes me feel connected and that I am helping the school," says Cheryl Burke, a prayer-walker who continues to invite friends to participate.

The prayer time was advertised as rain or shine. "It would start raining or drizzling right after the prayer time but not during the prayer walk," says Yamileth Klingstrand, AAA staff member and prayer-walker.

Roberts feels like this prayer-walking experience has "absolutely" changed her prayer life: "I'm a multitasker. I couldn't just sit in the gazebo and pray without getting distracted. Prayer-walking showed me that I need structure in my prayer life."

WALLA WALLA VALLEY MEDICAL SOCIETY SPONSORS PHYSICIAN-SHADOWING PILOT PROGRAM

Pre-medicine students from Walla Walla University (WWU), Whitman College and Walla Walla Community College can now participate in a new physician-shadowing pilot program in the Walla Walla Valley. Sponsored by the Walla Walla Valley Medical Society, the Clinical Shadowing Program unites local hospitals and clinics with the three colleges in Walla Walla, providing pre-med students with the opportunity to shadow physicians in areas that interest them.

A growing trend in medical school admissions is the emphasis on physician-shadowing. Pre-med students with shadowing experience are more likely to be accepted into medical school and will also have a clearer idea on what medical specialization they wish to focus their study.

Washington State's medical school, University of Washington, has recently noted that a strong applicant should have 40 hours shadowing a physician prior to applying. The Walla Walla Valley Medical Society has dedicated itself to aiding students in meeting that recommendation by sponsoring this pilot program.

The requirements for this program include that the student must be listed as a pre-med student, visit their pre-med adviser about enrollment in the program, complete a confidentiality form and successfully complete at least one core physician to set up a shadowing schedule. The hospital or clinic then works with the student to complete the proper paperwork.

David Lindsey, WWU biology professor and pre-med adviser, states, "The purpose of this program is to observe the physician and see for oneself what the physician actually does

The American Medical Association has expressed an interest in this physician-shadowing program, and, if it proves successful, this program will serve as a model for others to implement nationwide.

MEETING NEEDS THROUGH CREATION HEALTH

Health is the gracious gift of God, but achieving and maintaining a healthful lifestyle isn't easy. To help individuals take ownership of their health and integrate it within the context of faith, Adventist Health has partnered with local churches to introduce CREATION Health.

Pioneered at Florida Hospital in Orlando, CREATION Health is a faith-based wellness plan centered on eight biblical principles found in the creation story and supported by evidence-based science. By consistently practicing these eight principles,

- Choice
- Rest
- Environment
- Activity
- Trust
- Interpersonal relationships
- Outlook and
- Nutrition

CREATION Health participants improve their health, mind, body and spirit.

"We're continuously looking at new ways of partnering with our churches to improve health," says Paul Crampton, Adventist Health assistant vice president for mission and spiritual care. "We'd like to help churches become 'wellness centers' for their communities."

To that end, Adventist Health sponsored education, training and resources in 2013 to help local faith leaders bring CREATION Health to their congregations and communities. Pastors and health ministries leaders from 10 churches in Oregon, Washington and California participated in two days of CREATION Health certification training in September 2013. The churches then piloted CREATION Health programs, with support from their local Adventist Health hospitals.

City Sanctuary, an Adventist urban mission in downtown Portland, Ore., was one of the pilot sites. With support from Adventist Medical Center in Portland, City Sanctuary presented CREATION Health in depth to a group of 25 people and on a broader basis to its congregation as a whole.

"The spectrum of people in the small group ran from high achievers to low-income, marginalized people because that's who we work with downtown," explains Dan George, City Sanctuary pastor. "It was a small group helping each other be accountable as they were learning and growing."

George likened his presentation of CREATION Health to a 12-step program, in which each person worked at his or her own pace, deciding individually how much he or she was ready to change. George and volunteer coordinator Tom White presented CREATION Health to the small group during Sabbath School time, through lectures, DVDs and discussions. At the same time George preached each letter in the word CREATION to the entire congregation during Sabbath worship.

"CREATION Health is all about helping people make better choices," says George. "It's an extremely positive wellness program."

To quantify CREATION Health's impact on health, Adventist Health sponsored biometric screenings for participants at all 10 churches at the start of their programs and again six months later. The screenings measured cholesterol, blood pressure, blood sugar and triglycerides. The results showed a 15 percent increase in overall wellness. "This is objective, scientific data that demonstrates CREATION Health positively impacts health," Crampton says.

"Piloting the program was another way Adventist Health could partner with our churches to effectively meet the needs of the populations we serve together," he continues. "CREATION Health is a lifestyle, preventive approach that we're bringing to our local communities to help people adopt behaviors so they can live healthier longer."

For more information on how your church can offer CREATION Health, contact your local conference health ministries department.

PERSPECTIVE

ACCIDENTAL PAGANS

Why is it so easy to be an accidental pagan but not an accidental Christian?

The greatest Christmas card ever bestowed upon me had gilded edges, dazzling red and green accents, and the following message:

“Jesus is the reason for the season!” TRUE!

“Merry Christmas!” FALSE!!!!

The sender had actually crossed off the holiday greeting portion and wrote “FALSE” — with multiple exclamation points so I would know this was serious.

I was confused. But thankfully the sender included a multipage letter, with festive green and red font, explaining the pagan nature of the world’s most popular holiday. If I didn’t “hang my stockings with care” (metaphorically speaking), I would be guilty of brazen paganism.

I display this card every year. It’s my favorite decoration.

Every year I run into grinchers trying to steal Christmas. They lurk in church lobbies, send “concerned” emails, and manage shady websites with MIDI hymns and mismatched fonts. Their questionable hermeneutics and historiographies let you know you are on God’s naughty list if you have too much yuletide cheer.

I have written elsewhere on the methodology used to slam Saint Nick’s season, and, as an Adventist, I have pointed to many positive things Ellen White, one of our influential denominational founders, had to say about exchanging gifts (Review and Herald, Dec. 26, 1882) and Christmas trees — even in church (Review and Herald, Dec. 11, 1879). The only negative things she says about the holiday have to do with our tendency to saturate it with materialism and our selfish ignorance of those in need — counsel even people with a secular persuasion can appreciate. I tried pointing this out to a Christmas-hater once, and they countered with the “fact” that these weren’t her “inspired writings.”

#convenient

I don’t want to rehash the history of this debate anymore, but I do want to throw out an element that has bothered me — and I hope it will bother you. Why is it so easy to be an accidental pagan but not an accidental Christian?

We see people wearing apparel, jewelry, tattoos, etc., with crosses on them — but nobody would say they are secretly worshipping Jesus. People attend financial seminars and school concerts inside our sanctuaries, but does that make them believers?

Are they in danger of heaven?

When the Romans destroyed the temple in Jerusalem and built the temple of Jupiter on its ruins, would sensational pagan evangelists point out the traces of Jewish symbolism and architecture infringing on the worship of Roman gods? When evolutionary biologist Richard Dawkins listens to Handel’s Messiah, does his name disappear off the Devil’s Ledger of Death and appear in the Lamb’s Book of Life?

Based on some of the reasoning I hear, it almost seems like some credit the devil with more power than Jesus. Whatever happened to the reassuring words of Jesus, “I give them eternal life, and they will never perish, and no one will snatch them out of my hand. My Father, who has given them to me, is greater than all, and no one is able to snatch them out of the Father’s hand” (John 10:28–29 ESV)?

Questions to ponder as you celebrate, or try to exterminate, this holiday season.

A SHAMEFUL CHRISTMAS STORY

faithfulness to God can disrupt your life and defame your reputation. That's our Christmas story today.

The celebrated virgin told the announcing angel, "Behold, I am the servant of the Lord; let it be to me according to your word" (Luke 1:38). But Mary's legendary submission to God's will for her life did not spare her the pain or shame of radical faithfulness.

Her own fiancé doubted she was telling the truth. Hear her impassioned appeal to the man she loved: "I wasn't unfaithful to you or to God — please believe me!" Joseph didn't. He decided to get rid of her, according to Matt. 1:19: "Joseph, being a just man and unwilling to put her to shame, resolved to divorce her quietly."

So Joseph was a decent fellow who didn't wish to humiliate Mary publicly; he just needed to get her out of his life. So he "resolved" to abandon his beloved to the minimum consequences of adultery. It took a dramatic visit from an angel to convince Joseph that Mary was telling the truth. Gabriel defended Mary's faith and faithfulness: "That which is conceived in her is from the Holy Spirit" (verse 20).

We don't know how long Mary was in limbo with Perhaps nobody in Nazareth believed Mary was telling the truth about her swelling abdomen.

Joseph. The Bible just says "as he considered these things" (verse 20) — that is, as he considered how to implement his resolution to put her away.

Meanwhile, perhaps nobody in Nazareth believed Mary was telling the truth about her swelling abdomen. Apparently desperate, "Mary arose and went with haste to the hill country, to a town in Judah" (Luke 1:39). This was not a shopping trip to find cute outfits for the new baby. Mary got out of town "with haste" and traveled 100 miles on a lonely journey to find shelter with the only couple in Israel who knew firsthand about angels announcing miracle pregnancies.

Imagine Mary's relief upon finally arriving at the home of Elizabeth, who greeted her with a Spirit-inspired affirmation: "Blessed are you among women, and blessed is the fruit of your womb" (verse 42). So this young mother was blessed by God, not deserving of rejection by the man she loved.

And her Baby was blessed too — not a son of shame, but Immanuel, God with us.

Mary stayed several months at Elizabeth's crisis pregnancy shelter before returning to Nazareth's suspicions and gossip. Ultimately Joseph did believe her, but only after another persuasive visit from the angel to Nazareth.

What can we learn this Christmas season from Mary's time of trouble? Many things, including Paul's assessment of the good life that comes from the obedience of faith: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us" (Rom. 8:18). So whatever may be our own suffering this season, we may echo Mary's courageous commitment: "Behold the servant of the Lord; do with my life whatever you will" (Luke 1:38).

LET'S TALK

CHARITY

“Now abideth faith, hope and charity. And the greatest of these is charity.” I Cor. 13:13

harities begins at home, so the old saw goes. This year, though, it seemed to begin under a cascade of ice water. The fad du jour, the Ice Bucket Challenge, swept the country and caught up normally rational people in gleeful irrationality.

Instead of entrepreneurs for the kingdom, we've become consumers of the world.

I confess it was somewhat compelling to witness dignified church, academic and hospital executives, yea even a Gleaner author or two, willingly drenched to the bone. After all, it further confirmed our stance on baptism by immersion.

The silly fun was all for a great cause. I have relatives who suffer with ALS — Lou Gehrig's Disease. I am thrilled that this most recent frenzy benefited research into a difficult affliction via ice buckets everywhere.

I enjoyed these wild exercises in one-upmanship as much as anyone. There is much to be gained (millions of dollars, apparently) by positive peer pressure toward a good cause. But charity is defined in Scripture as love, so there is a deeper level to charitable giving worth exploring.

There's a term that used to confuse me. "Disinterested benevolence" is an attitude of giving that became prominent in Christian movements, including our own, during the 19th century. Because it has fallen out of vogue lately, to the casual believer it now seems a bit awkward and counterintuitive. When contributing to a good cause, why would we want to be "disinterested"? Yet I think this idea is worthy of a revival, for it is intrinsic in the very principles of the kingdom. It is core to the gift of our Savior.

When we share something of ourselves in disinterested benevolence, we do so without regard for a return benefit. We give for the sake of a cause bigger than our own. We do not loan this money with a caveat that it must reap a worthy investment to our own purpose. We do not give in order to look good, gain status, join the crowd or pile up credit toward some future windfall.

A firm commitment to disinterested benevolence has led many in our church to lives of self-denial, to go without some personal comforts or adornments in order to further an eternal mission. It's an area in which some of us are seriously out of practice. Instead of entrepreneurs for the kingdom, we've become consumers of the world. God gives us a different benchmark. Charity begins with love. The apostle Paul reminds us, "If I give all I possess to the poor and give over my body to hardship that I may boast, but do not have love, I gain nothing" (1 Cor. 13:3).

Unselfish, disinterested benevolence is at the center of the Advent, which reveals a God of incalculable love emptying heaven for a planet and a people that have given Him nothing but grief.

This Christmas season, revel in the message and music of the incarnation. Thrill to the concerts, the lights, the nativity programs. But don't let the all-time gift of our Father's love become just a fleeting flurry of sight and sound. Consider His example of true charity and choose to follow in His steps.

Do I matter anymore?

fled with my family when the rebels attacked...

...survived alone when everyone else was murdered on the way to the refugee camp

...nearly starved to death as a forsaken and helpless orphan

...need Restoration and the hope of Eternal Life
